RE: Milliron v. T-Mobile USA, Inc. objection to settlement

To Whom It May Concern:

Thank you for the opportunity to participate in the Class Action Settlement opportunity regarding T-Mobile. After reviewing the website (www.etf-settlement.com), I am concerned about the terms of the settlement and would like to object.

My credit has been negatively impacted due to my initial refusal to pay the $200 disconnect fee. The settlement appears to offer no remedy for such reporting to the credit bureaus. And, while I'm frustrated about the $200 fee I ultimately paid, I'm more frustrated by the impact this negative reporting has had on my impeccable credit report and associated credit scores. Additionally, the potential settlement offers only up to $125 for the $200 fee that I paid.

Please contact me at (918) 906-0364 to discuss potential options before I submit a claim or exclude myself from the Class Action Settlement. Again, thank you for the opportunity. I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

Drew J. Anderssen

To Whom It May Concern:

This is my third letter to T-Mobile; my first two were to customer service, and now this one to the financial division. My letters were dated August 11, 2007 and October 9, 2007, in reference to my account, #140274937.

I am extremely concerned that my credit report has been negatively impacted by a "late payment." I attempted to dispute the final bill, by mail, due to the $200 disconnect fee I was charged by your company. After being a T-Mobile customer for 7 years, I had began experiencing repeated billing and service problems; these problems ultimately caused me to cancel service and begin new service with AT&T Wireless. I never received any response to my multiple billing disputes by mail. I ignored attempts to collect because I was waiting on response to my letter. To this date, I still have not received response...yet continue to receive delinquent billing notices.

While I do not believe that I should be required to pay the final payment of $262.16, I have enclosed a check for that amount. Clearly by now, I'm not going to receive a response to my dispute. You will note by my payment history and my exemplary credit history that I do not have a long history of late payments.

Because of this extreme lack of customer service, I expect NOT to have this "delinquent payment" negatively impact my credit report. Any negative reporting will be addressed through any legal means necessary and permissible by law.

You may contact me by phone at (918) 906-0364 or by mail at my home billing address.

Sincerely,

Drew J. Anderssen

SECOND CORRESPONDENCE TO THIS ADDRESS

To Whom It May Concern:

This is my fourth letter to T-Mobile; my first two were to customer service, and one prior to this one to the financial division. My letters were dated August 11, 2007 and October 9, 2007, and November 11, 2007 in reference to my account, #140274937.

I continue to receive collection calls from your collections company, BCR regarding final payment on my account, which included a $200 disconnect. As I have mentioned in my prior letter, I do not believe I am responsible for the disconnect fee due to the poor service T-Mobile provided to me in my final months as customer. As a consumer, I have the ultimate choice to "fire" a company I do business with based on their customer service. And, after 7 years of service with T-Mobile, that's exactly what I did.

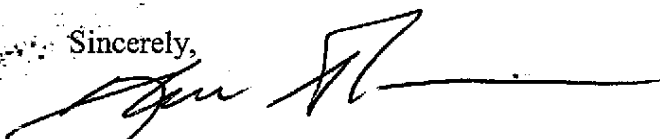

As stated in my last note, I attempted to dispute the final bill with no response or resolution from T-Mobile. Last week, I "gave in" and sent final payment in full to your company, and I continue to receive collections calls. Each time, the company leaves a message (my phone strictly voicemail) asking for a return call to (866) 364-9836. When I attempt to return the call multiple times, on each occasion, I am automatically placed on hold after a recorded greeting, and then a voicemail comes on saying the mailbox is full.

Also as stated in my previous letter, I expect that my credit report not be negatively impacted by this "delinquency." This "delinquency" was due to lack of response by T-Mobile on an account that was in dispute. If I find that my credit report has been negatively impacted by T-Mobile, BCR, or it's associated companies, I will take all necessary means as afforded by local, state, and federal laws to see to it that my credit report be corrected and T-Mobile (and it's associated companies) be held responsible for false credit reporting.

I will continue to await a response from you, and fully expect that response to be "payment made in full" and "credit report not impacted negatively." You will note by my payment history and my exemplary credit history that I do not have a history of late payments with ANY company, including T-Mobile.

You may contact me by phone at (918) 906-0364 or by mail at my home billing address, as shown above.

Sincerely,

Drew J. Anderssen
